TWO DIE, THIRD IS BADLY HURT IN LIQUOR WAR

Authorities of Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia Probing Battle.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Mar. 12. Two men are dead, another is seriously wounded and a fourth is in jail here today while authorities of three states, West Virginia, Kentucky and Virginia, are piecing together details of a bloody battle in the mountain fastness of the tri-state border region which is believed to have climaxed the meeting of rival "moonshine" bands.

The dead are Charlie Maxwell, of Upper Mingo-co, and Riley Hardin, 24, of Kentucky.

Jeff Hardin, 24, a cousin of one of the dead men, is in a local hospital with part of his leg shot away and a bullet wound in his body. George Hardin, another relative, is being held in jail.

Both maintain the stolidness of mountaineers and refused to answer questions of police.

Mingo-co deputy sheriffs say the shooting occurred Sunday at Alnwick, in a remote district. Due to the sparsely settled neighborhood and the absence of telephone service, first reports of the battle did not reach Williamson until late yesterday and the meager details were not learned until today.

"MOONSHINE" GANGS

Officers returning from the scene of the shooting today said the trouble started between rival Virginia and Mingo-co "moonshine" gangs, with Kentuckians as members of the West Virginia outfit. Mrs. Sam Mountrich, whose mountain cabin the men crashed, said she had seen two men cross the Virginia line in an intoxicated condition, carrying shotguns. A short time later, she stated, she heard shots.

Mrs. Mountrich further told police that she had seen Ethel Hardin, another relative of one of the dead men, fire a pistol and then fled with a mountaineer across the Virginia border. The woman declared that more than 50 shots were fired and when the smoke cleared away, two men were dead and the third was wounded.

The border region, where the shooting occurred, has been the scene of several feudal gun battles in recent months.

Justice William Hitz denied Doheny's plea in abatement, which was offered on Monday by the oil man's attorneys. They contended that Doheny, once acquitted of conspiracy in the same case, was being put in double jeopardy now by being tried for bribery.

Flay Drinking Officials On U. S. Payrolls

Mrs. Ford, Mrs. Vic Donahey, Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, and Many Other Nationally Prominent Women Send Messages To Aid Speakers—In Meantime Sen. Dyer Asks Hoover For Legalization of 2.75 Per Cent Beer.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Militant and defiant women marched before the House judiciary committee today denouncing all attempts to repeal the prohibition amendment and instead demanding that liquor buyers as well as sellers be prosecuted.

The score of women speakers, marshalled by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Boston, chairman of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, called prohibition a blessing to the nation, attacked proposals for a nation-wide referendum and flayed "drinking dries" on the government pay-roll.

DYER APPEALS

At the same time, Representative L. C. Dyer (R) of Missouri, was appearing before the Hoover law enforcement commission with a plea for legalization of 2.75 per cent beer, and the House was confronted with a report from the Christopherson committee proposing drastic modification of the stern Jones law.

The prohibition controversy churned all over the capitol. The "woman's dry" defense of prohibition was offered before the committee as an answer to the previous proposals of speakers for the nation's leading wet organizations to repeal the Eighteenth amendment and return liquor control to the states.

"No compromise" was the slogan of the women throughout their presentation. They not only claimed the right to speak for 12,000,000 women belonging to organizations affiliated with the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, but predicted that they would enroll millions more to back strict enforcement.

Messages from prominent women in a dozen states were read before the speakers took the floor. Among them were messages from Mrs. Henry Ford, wife of the auto magnate; Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, wife of the inventor; Mrs. Vic Donahey, wife of the former Ohio governor, and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw of the New York committee for law enforcement.

MRS. FORD'S MESSAGE
"I am heartily in favor of the Eighteenth amendment without modification," said Mrs. Ford. "It is a law of the United States and should be observed by all of us. In my opinion it has been of untold benefit to the women as well as the men of our country in improved living conditions and a more prosperous nation."

Mrs. Edison labeled prohibition "a blessing" and Mrs. Donahey declared that "the great state of Ohio is squarely for prohibition and law enforcement."

"The battle is on—primarily a woman's battle," said Mrs. Peabody. "The normal woman, not the sub-normal or neurotic type, knows alcohol to be a habit-making drug which wrecks body, soul and mind, as dangerous as opium to the individual—more dangerous to the family and community."

"There is no organized rebellion against prohibition of opium by advocates of personal liberty. The alcoholic taint from past generations persists in rebellion against this necessary law against the alcohol traffic."

"A 10-year-old law, like a 10-year-old boy, is not perfectly regulated, but requires example, support, education and discipline."

"Women will cheerfully grant to men management of the tariff, finances, problems of transportation and water power. Men need the help of women to control the alcoholic power."

The women speakers denied that drinking is increasing among young people, citing reports in pre-prohibition days of "alarming drinking" among the young.

M'DONALD CONFIDENT

Defeat Suffered By Labor Party Thought To Carry No Significance.

LONDON, March 12.—Despite the defeat suffered by his government on an amendment to the coal bill, Premier MacDonald was confident today that he would have no further trouble warding off thrusts of Conservatives aided by Liberals in the House of Commons.

The premier's first defeat in parliament was minimized by laborite leaders today as having little significance. The power of the government was not at stake when the vote on the amendment to the proposed bill was taken as the bill was only in the committee stage.

The Conservative amendment on which the laborites were defeated 282 to 274 was designed to kill the government's proposed levy on coal mined for domestic consumption.

MURDER TRIAL OF SCHROEDER ON THIRD DAY

Five Witnesses From Maricopa-Co., Arizona, On Hand At Opening of Court.

COURTROOM, NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 12.—The trial jury which will decide the guilt or innocence of Irene Schroeder, charged with murder for her alleged part in the killing of Corporal Brady Paul of the State Highway Patrol, was completed in Lawrence county court at 11:40 a. m., today.

John Fullerton, a middle-aged salesman, of Mahoningtown, was selected as the twelfth trial juror.

Immediately after Fullerton was sworn into service, Ralph M. Campbell, Clerk of Court, charged the jury. Irene, showing no noticeable emotion except that of relief over the conclusion of the monotonous procedure, stood and faced the standing jury, as the indictment, arraignment and plea were read.

When the reading was completed at 11:55 o'clock, Judge R. Lawrence Hildebrand immediately announced a recess until 1:30 p. m., when the introduction of testimony began.

Kedgin Powell, Youngstown attorney and one of the chief law-works of defense counsel, admitted today that efforts by the defense would be centered on defeating the death penalty rather than striving for a clear verdict of acquittal.

As the third day of the trial began, Irene was reported practically recovered from a slight indisposition suffered yesterday morning.

Five witnesses from Maricopa county, Arizona, who were wild flight across the country, were eliminated with a gun battle, which she and Glenn Dugan, her alleged lover, were captured on hand for the opening of court today.

The party included Mattie Jackson and Ruth Smith, woman inmates of the Maricopa-co jail where Irene was confined; Sheriff Charles N. Wright, who headed the capturing posse; his wife, and Deputy Sheriff Hans Corr.

The women prisoners are believed to have made depositions in which they allege Irene admitted to them her complicity in the killing of Corporal Paul.

Five Witnesses From Maricopa-Co, Arizona, On Hand At Opening of Court.

COURTROOM, NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 12.—The trial jury which will decide the guilt or innocence of Irene Schroeder, charged with murder for her alleged part in the killing of Corporal Brady Paul of the State Highway Patrol, was completed in Lawrence county court at 11:40 a. m. today.

John Fullerton, a middle-aged salesman, of Mahoningtown, was selected as the twelfth trial juror.

Immediately after Fullerton was sworn into service, Ralph M. Campbell, Clerk of Court, charged the jury. Irene, showing no noticeable emotion except that of relief over the conclusion of the monotonous procedure, stood and faced the standing jury, as the indictment, arrangement and plea were read.

When the reading was completed at 11:55 o'clock, Judge R. Lawrence Hildebrand immediately announced a recess until 1:30 p. m., when the introduction of testimony began.

Kedgin Powell, Youngstown attorney and one of the chief bulwarks of defense counsel, admitted today that efforts by the defense would be centered on defeating the death penalty rather than striving for a clear verdict of acquittal.

As the third day of the trial began, Irene was reported practically recovered from a slight indisposition suffered yesterday morning.

Five witnesses from Maricopa county, Arizona, where Irene's wild flight across the country was climaxed with a gun battle in which she and Glenn Dague, her alleged lover, were captured, were on hand for the opening of court today.

The party included Mattie Jackson and Ruth Smith, woman inmates of the Maricopa-co jail where Irene was confined; Sheriff Charles N. Wright, who headed the capturing posse; his wife, and Deputy Sheriff Hans Corr.

The women prisoners are believed to have made depositions in which they allege Irene admitted to them her complicity in the killing of Corporal Paul.

MEINFELTERS ARE INJURED

Local Residents Hurt When Automobile Backs Down Grade Near City.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Meinfelter of S. Court-st., were the victims of a peculiar accident at their farm, in which Mrs. Meinfelter suffered a fracture of a bone in her right arm, and Mr. Meinfelter received an injured left leg, a sprained back and bruised shoulder.

They had driven to their farm near Circleville, and Mr. Meinfelter had gotten out to talk to the tenant. He parked his car in the lane which has considerable slope. The emergency brake was set.

A large Russian wolfhound, which always greets Mr. and Mrs. Meinfelter vociferously when they make a call at the farm, leaped into the car and tried to jump up on Mrs. Meinfelter. As he did so the weight of his body released the brake, and the car started down the hill.

Mr. Meinfelter saw it start and rushed down some steps planning to turn the car up the embankment to stop it. In his hurry he stumbled into a rut, and was thrown with great force to the ground. Mrs. Meinfelter, in trying to get out of the moving car, fell, and fractured her arm.

INVENTORY FILED

An inventory returned in Probate court Tuesday of the estate of the late Lewis Thomas of Circleville, placed the appraisement of the estate at $900, real and personal property.

Charles Gerhardt, Barton Walters and Fred R. Nicholas were appraisers of the estate.

Ralph Roby, Adah B. Thomas and Garfield Robinson are executors.

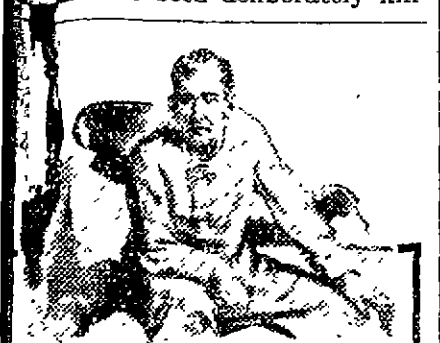

BEES BY THE POUND SALES METHOD

Package Bees Imported by Northern States Used To Expand Bee Yards.

Most livestock sells by the head. Bees are too slow and too shy to be shipped from southern to northern states in packages, but sold by the pound, according to a new bulletin "Handling Package Bees," just published by the Agricultural Extension Service of the Ohio State University. The bulletin was written by Virgil N. Argo, extension specialist in beekeeping.

A "package" of bees consists of two or three pounds of live bees, with a queen, and provisions for feeding, enclosed in a screen box for shipment. In the southern states the earlier coming of summer makes it possible for the beekeepers to take large numbers of young, strong, full-grown bees from their colonies and send them to the northern states at just about the time when the northern beekeeper is observing the first signs of activities among his colonies.

The package bees are used by the northern apiarists to replace colonies which have died during the winter, to enlarge or establish in apiary, or to replace colonies which have been deliberately killed.

ed off in the fall in the most northern territory because it is less expensive to buy package bees each spring than it is to winter over the old colonies where cold is intense.

The middle or latter part of April is about the right time for the Ohio beekeeper to obtain his packaged bees, in Argo's opinion. Beekeepers' journals contain numerous advertisements of reliable apiarists in the south who will supply the package bees.

PLOW GROUND FOR BEST SOYBEAN CROP

Higher Yields Obtained From Plowed Than Unplowed Seed Beds.

As a general rule, the ground should be plowed for soybeans, according to results of tests by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, cited by the farm crops department of the Ohio State University. "There are few exceptions to this general rule," says one of the bulletins issued by the experiment station, "as when the soil is generally loose and when a good seed bed can be prepared by disking."

Experiments at Wooster have yielded 10.58 bushels of grain and 1895 pounds of straw to the acre on disked corn stubble land, while plowed corn stubble land yielded 15.79 bushels of grain and 2,052 pounds of straw.

Early plowing is recommended as the better practice, since it gives time for the seed bed to settle and opportunity to kill one crop of weeds before the soybeans are planted. Late plowing in a dry season may leave the soil so loose and dry that germination will be poor and the early growth of the soybeans stunted. Many growers prepare the seed bed for soybeans before that for corn, but do not plant the soybeans until the corn is in the ground.

poor health-

The annoyance of pimples and skin blotches lies not only in the fact that they spoil beauty and appearance. They are also unmistakable signs of basic faults in the system—usually in the dietetic tract. The sure way to find the source of the trouble and correct it is through the help of your physician. Skin eruptions may be a sign of far more important ailments.

The wise and safe thing to do is use the experience and knowledge your doctor puts at your disposal to guard your health. And another sure protection is to guard the efficiency of the doctor's prescriptions with the care and thoroughness of this expert pharmacy.

Time savers

The great American instinct is to save time—a lot of time—and then some more time. In the big affairs and the little things of life, time is the most valuable thing at our command.

Limited trains, automatic telephones, special editions of newspapers, sixty-miles-an-hour automobiles, airplanes still faster—we have these things in answer to our demand for speed. And an equally important time saver in the lives of people today is advertising. Just as surely as any other modern service, the advertisements bridge hours and days for people who have wants to be filled.

Readers of advertisements are the same people who demand the utmost efficiency in communication, in business, in their daily life. They know that a few minutes' reading of the advertisements will tell them more about products, values and the intelligent spending of their money than they could discover in days by any other method.

And like the other great time savers, advertisements save money and energy, as well. The reading of them is a genuine human economy.

Time savers

The great American instinct is to save time—a lot of time—and then some more time. In the big affairs and the little things of life, time is the most valuable thing at our command.

Limited trains, automatic telephones, special editions of newspapers, sixty-miles-an-hour automobiles, airplanes still faster—we have these things in answer to our demand for speed. And an equally important time saver in the lives of people today is advertising. Just as surely as any other modern service, the advertisements bridge hours and days for people who have wants to be filled.

Readers of advertisements are the same people who demand the utmost efficiency in communication, in business, in their daily life. They know that a few minutes' reading of the advertisements will tell them more about products, values and the intelligent spending of their money than they could discover in days by any other method.

And like the other great time savers, advertisements save money and energy, as well. The reading of them is a genuine human economy.

BEES BY THE POUND SALES METHOD

Package Bees Imported By Northern States Used To Expand Bee Yards.

Most livestock sells by the head. Putting bees is too slow and too risky, so bees shipped from southern to northern states in packages, sold by the pound, according to a new bulletin "Handling Package Bees," just published by the Agricultural Extension Service of the Ohio State University. The bulletin was written by Virgil N. Argo, extension specialist in beekeeping.

A "package" of bees consists of one or three pounds of live bees, with a queen, and provisions for feeding, enclosed in a screen box or shipment. In the southern states the earlier coming of summer makes it possible for the beekeepers to take large numbers of young, strong, full-grown bees from their colonies and send them to the northern states at just about the time when the northern beekeeper is observing the first signs of activities among his colonies.

The package bees are used by the northern apiarists to replace colonies which have died during the winter, to enlarge or establish in apiary, or to replace colonies which have been deliberately killed.

ed off in the fall in the most northern territory because it is less expensive to buy package bees each spring than it is to winter over the old colonies where cold is intense.

The middle or latter part of April is about the right time for the Ohio beekeeper to obtain his packaged bees, in Argo's opinion. Beekeepers' journals contain numerous advertisements of reliable apiarists in the south who will supply the package bees.

PLOW GROUND FOR BEST SOYBEAN CROP

Higher Yields Obtained From Plowed Than Unplowed Seed Beds.

As a general rule, the ground should be plowed for soybeans, according to results of tests by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, cited by the farm crops department of the Ohio State University. "There are few exceptions to this general rule," says one of the bulletins issued by the experiment station, "as when the soil is generally loose and when a good seed bed can be prepared by disking."

Experiments at Wooster have yielded 10.58 bushels of grain and 1895 pounds of straw to the acre on disked corn stubble land, while plowed corn stubble land yielded 15.79 bushels of grain and 2,052 pounds of straw.

Early plowing is recommended as the better practice, since it gives time for the seed bed to settle and opportunity to kill one crop of weeds before the soybeans are planted. Late plowing in a dry season may leave the soil so loose and dry that germination will be poor and the early growth of the soybeans stunted. Many growers prepare the seed bed for soybeans before that for corn, but do not plant the soybeans until the corn is in the ground.

COLUMBUS, O., March 12.—Three new buildings which will be built on the Ohio State University campus at a cost of approximately $1,350,000, today had been approved by the university board of trustees following its annual monthly meeting here Tuesday afternoon.

National Outdoor Life Show to be Staged in Columbus

Columbus, (Special).—Sioux Indians from the Black Hills of South Dakota led by Young Chief Red Cloud, grandson of the greatest war leader of the red men of the Wild West, expert log rollers from the big timber regions, native wild animals, fur bearers, game and song birds, fish—thousands of them—colorful displays, will be seen in the Columbus Auditorium, March 29 to April 5, at the National Outdoor Life Exhibition staged by Hunter-Trapper-Trapper, national sportsmen's magazine.

The exhibition brings the wilderness to the city. It's a life with the spirit of the great open space, and thrills with romance of the trapline, the hunt, the mountain trout stream and the glorious fascination of the wild free life of the waterways and virgin forests. It is the Sportsmen's Show of Shows—interesting, instructive, entertaining.

More than 60,000 square feet of floor space will be used for the exhibition. A hall with a capacity of 100 tons of water has been installed for the log rollers, features and other aquatic events, including the casting contest open to every angler. The exhibition will be open daily from 1 to 10 p. m.

Among the exhibits will be a great variety of displays of merchandise and equipment associated with the sports and commercial pursuits of the big outdoors—fishing, boating, camping, fur farming, hunting and trapping. Some of the largest mammals, birds in these lands will be represented.

Hunter-Trapper-Trapper, sponsor of the exhibition, is a dominant leader among national outdoor magazines. It is read in the homes of thousands of outdoor folk and in the hunting lodges in Maine, the fishing camps in Florida, the motor tourists' tents in Arizona, the wolfers' shack in the Rockies, the trapper's cabin in Alaska. It is published in Columbus.

THINK OF YOUR AUTOMOBILE IN TERMS OF TOMORROW

Ultimate cost is as important as first cost in the purchase of an automobile

WHEN you purchase an automobile you are making an investment of a considerable amount of money. It is essential, therefore, that you give careful thought to the best selection and know what you are getting for your automobile dollars.

The first cost is important because it may mean an immediate, satisfactory saving. Of equal importance is the ultimate cost after thousands of miles of service. This ultimate cost is the true measure of automobile value.

THE first cost of the new Ford is unusually low not only because of economies in manufacturing, but because the same principles that inspire these savings are extended to every other step that means greater service to the public. It is easy to see that economies in production would be of little value if they were sacrificed later through high charges for distribution, selling, financing and accessories.

The Ford dealer, therefore, does business on the same low-profit margin as the Ford Motor Company. His discount or commission is twenty-five to fifty per cent lower than that of any other automobile dealer. You gain because he makes a small profit on many sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales.

The difference in selling cost, combined with the low charges for financing and accessories, amounts to at least $50 to $75 on each car. This is as important as economies in production in keeping down the price you pay for the new Ford.

THE low ultimate cost of the new Ford is the result of sound design, quality of material and unusual care in manufacturing. Friction and wear are reduced by the accuracy with which each part is made and assembled.

These factors combine to decrease the cost of operation and add months and years to the useful life of the car. The good performance and low yearly depreciation of the new Ford are indicative of the enduring quality built into it at the factory.

SERVICE charges are on the same fair, economical basis as the making and selling of the car and replacement parts are always available at low prices through all Ford dealers. In two, three or five years, depending on how much you drive, the saving in operating and maintaining a new Ford will amount to even more than the saving on the first cost.

Think in terms of tomorrow, therefore, when you purchase an automobile. For tomorrow will reveal its true worth.

A RED DEFEAT

Communist Unemployment Day, on the whole, was mild and harmless. It turned out to be not at all the flaming protest that the international red leaders expected and hoped. Some cities saw exciting riots. A few demonstrators here and there, in a dozen countries, were hurt in the oratorical and fistful melees. The police clubbed a few heads and cops on horseback scattered a few struggling mobs. But it was too tame to suit the reds themselves.

This was partly because there are not near enough reds anywhere in this country, or even in most foreign countries, to stage anything resembling a revolution. The crowds at any such demonstration are mostly mere spectators drawn by curiosity, who mill around with the trouble-makers and come to be mistaken for them.

But the passing of the day without more serious results may be credited mostly to the growing intelligence of civil authorities and police. That is especially true in America.

It is found that when the Communists, or whatever else the reds are at any particular time or place call themselves, are allowed to blow off steam without needless interference, their emotional pressure is so greatly reduced that nothing much happens. Reds do on martyrdom. The real danger is for the police to sit on the safety valve denying them free speech and assembly.

These rights still stand. Unemployment Day was a greater triumph for the Constitutional Bill of Rights, than of the Communist movement.

CHECK ON HIT-SKIPPERS

An ingenious New Jersey lawyer has invented a mechanical device which is to end the depredations of the hit-skip driver. It is fairly simple—a tube an inch in diameter set just above the front bumper of an automobile and so arranged that if it is jarred a trigger will eject 25 paper disks. Each disk is to bear the license number of the automobile and the name of its owner.

If the careless driver stops after an accident to pick up these tell-tale, scattered papers he will be caught. If he flees, he leaves identification behind.

It is a wonderful device, no doubt. The difficulty will be in persuading drivers to install it on their cars and to get re-fills immediately whenever the charge of paper disks has been used. If automobile manufacturers should make this a regular piece of equipment on all cars, it still seems a simple matter for a driver who contemplates hitting and skipping to bump into his own garage door just forcibly enough to get rid of the identifying papers before he sets forth on his criminally careless adventures.

It looks as if the inventor would have to try again.

Now there are to be baby blimps fool-proof" costing $1,000 and capable of carrying one American family in the air. That sounds like a better idea than the heavier-than-air flying flivvers we've all been waiting for.

Uncle Eben

"Dar is power in the influence of a great name," said Uncle Eben, "but it has limits. You can't make a baby grow up to tell the truth simply by naming him George Washington."—Washington Star.

"MASTER of MONEY"
BY ROY VICKERS

CHAPTER XXXII.

"OACHMAN!" echoed Alan. "It's a good thing that fellow doesn't understand English. That is the pat-on. By a series of mortgages he probably owns the greater part of this outfit. The driver is his paid servant and he lives on the servant."

They drove out of the dock gates; Shirley, ignoring the dirtiness of the gharr, looked about her.

They were passing through a narrow sidestreet with a view of the main street ahead of them.

"Oh, they have bases!" exclaimed Shirley. "And this street here might be a street in Greenwich Village."

"You'll find bits of every place here—and of every time," answered Alan. "You'll find bits of the history of every country in the world walking about."

They turned into the main road, narrowly escaping collision with the latest model of a Rolls-Royce driven by a liveried chauffeur. On the other side of the Rolls-Royce was a team of four oxen drawing a cart laden with beer barrels, in charge of a driver in flowing robes and a dirty red headpiece.

"Look at those two things!" exclaimed Alan. "There's some three or four thousand years between them and neither of them is out of place here."

Presently they seemed to be passing out of the city proper into a suburban quarter. In a quiet square of comparatively modern stuccoed buildings, the gharr stopped.

"This is the Latetia," said Alan. "I stayed here once before and as far as I can remember, it should be good enough." As they walked through the revolving glass doors he added: "It's run by a quiet, decent Armenian."

"Not now, boss," said a sleek man standing in the lounge.

Alan turned.

"Oh, you've bought the place, have you?" he exclaimed. "I gather you're Armenian."

"No, I'm a Bulgarian," explained the man. "But I've had fifteen years' experience in New York. Andropoulos, who had the place before me, is dead. So are his wife and child. He had a bit too much to say to the police."

Alan nodded indifferently. Shirley wondered what the man meant by trouble with the police.

The hotel seemed comfortable enough at first sight, though the proprietor was unable to provide them with a private sitting-room. They engaged three bedrooms in each of which was a reproduction of the statue of Liberty and two religious subjects.

"I'd better go and see about that luggage of ours," said Alan when they had inspected their rooms. "The lobby here is quite decent and if I were you I'd stay there. We'll go on a tour of inspection when I get back."

In the lobby Shirley endured the conversation of the proprietor for an hour, at the end of which, being called away, he presented her with a copy of La Vie Parisienne and of a three-months-old New York paper. For another two hours she endured the boredom of total inactivity and then, seeing the proprietor return, decided to go out.

She found another main road turning into the heart of the city, then, fascinated with the sights and sounds about her, walked on. Presently, a few yards ahead of her a door opened and out of it ran an elderly Jew, crying loudly, the tears streaming down his cheeks. At the same time, behind her, she heard Alan's voice.

"Look out! There's going to be trouble!"

She turned round and as she turned had a fleeting glimpse of three men surrounding the Jew.

Then came the hoarse scream of a man in mortal agony.

Alan was urging her to a run. Running towards them was a policeman, who drew his revolver and fired. Instantly there came an answering report from behind them.

The next moment Alan picked her up in his arms and whisked her to a doorway. The door was locked, but the brickwork on either side was just wide enough to shield them from a chance bullet.

Alan's arms were about her, crushing her so that she could not breathe. At that moment all fear had left her.

"His back is exposed. He is risking his life for me," ran her thoughts.

"Why the devil did you leave that hotel when I told you not to?" he growled at her—it seemed hours later.

"I don't know. I was bored waiting for you. I'm very sorry. Alan, is it all over?"

"Yes. Don't look behind you. We'd better go back and have some lunch."

By the end of the first month Shirley had interviewed a number of minor officials, obtaining from them illusory promises and accomplishing in fact nothing whatever towards obtaining a grant of military protection.

But in other respects the month had not been wasted. She had become familiar with the city and such of the customs of its inhabitants as concerned herself and her mission. Also she had acquired a house.

Alan had been against taking a house as soon as she had mentioned it, and had never explained his reasons. Finally the boredom resulting from a lack of privacy at the hotel had won him over.

They had taken the furnished house of a once prosperous native of apparently modern sympathies for the house was well furnished throughout. It was pleasant enough even if judged by American standards. It had twelve rooms and a garden that sloped down to the tideless sea. A house that would have been commonplace enough in any Long Island bay, but for the fact that house, garden and waterfront were surrounded by spiked iron palings twelve feet high.

Shirley had been puzzled by the palings, thinking them a mistaken effort of decoration until Alan explained.

"Wait till you see an excited mob of a thousand or so Mussulmen running amuck—you'll be glad enough of the palings then," he had told her. And she had looked from the massive oak sideboard to the rest of the furniture and tried to imagine the frenzied Mussulmen.

The task of housekeeping she had not attempted and a Spanish Jewess looked after the Greek cook and two housemaids, and on the whole made a very good job of it.

While she was making her futile journeys to the various municipal offices, Alan was actively employed in inspecting and overhauling the local depot of Macedonian Developments.

"Things seem to be in a rather better state down here than the report led me to believe," he told her one day. "I shall make a trip up country this week and inspect the mines and the track that's already laid. In the meantime, if you want help with your end of the stick, let me know."

"Am I being too slow, Alan?"

"No. I didn't mean you to take that remark as a criticism."

"I can't really tell yet whether I am likely to do any good or not," she said thoughtfully. "I am working my way through a lot of nonentities and sifting them out—and it takes time to discover that they are nonentities. Tomorrow I'm seeing the Commissioner. Judging by the difficulty of running him to earth, he's rather exclusive."

They were sitting over the fire after dinner. It was now the middle of November and a spell of cold weather had set in. Alan was looking through an account book while she was turning the pages of a catalogue. Suddenly she laughed and he looked up.

"Feeling a bit nervous?" he asked.

"I was thinking how funny it has all turned out," she answered. "You made me think of something dangerous—red—travelling when you talked of Macedonia. It's all frightfully picturesque, of course, and interesting in its way, but I go out every morning in a comfortable hired car, do a bit of shopping and talk to polite officials. And in the evening—well, look at us. It may be the influence of this dreadful furniture but I feel that we are becoming exactly like an ordinary American suburban couple."

There was a long silence and she thought that he had returned his attention to the account book. But presently he spoke:

"Except that we are not a couple," Shirley.

"You are very literal," she objected lightly.

Inexplicably to her, the words had hurt her. Inexplicably, too, there had leaped into her mind that moment when his arms had been about her, shielding her from the chance of being hit by a stray bullet in the street.

"I suppose the truth is you got frightfully bored with the evenings here?" he suggested.

"And sigh for the old days?" she supplemented. "You're wrong, Alan. I'm not bored here with you. You couldn't bore me if you tried."

To her surprise he slammed the notebook and tucked it under his arm.

"I'm most gratified to hear that Shirley," he rasped back. "But I feel in very special danger of boring you tonight. And as I don't want to spoil my reputation I'll go to bed. Good night."

Shirley was amazed. This, she sensed, was no ordinary outbreak of bearishness. His voice had sounded definitely angry. For long she sat by herself, puzzling her brain to discover how she had offended him.

At breakfast on the following morning he seemed to have forgotten the incident, and she, too, had put it out of her mind by the time the hired car was waiting for her. "Good luck with the Commissioner!" he said amiably as she left the house.

Shirley felt that she was going to have good luck with the Commissioner. Perhaps it was the really sumptuous offices that gave her that impression. She was shown into an ante-room that might have formed part of a royal suite, where, after some delay, a minor official requested her to sign a caller's book, giving particulars of herself.

She signed the book as "Mrs. Alan Beaumay," after which the minor official made small conversation with her for a full hour; then, glancing at the clock, he exclaimed abruptly:

"Monsieur Stavros awaits your pleasure, madame."

The Commissioner, a puffy Greek in early middle-age, got up as she entered and then sat down abruptly as if his getting up had been a mistake—and it had been.

"This is the first time I have had the pleasure of addressing an American lady," he said in fluent French. "Is it possible that I can have the good fortune of being of some service?"

"The Commissioner is too kind," responded Shirley, and then listened patiently to a disclaimer on the part of the Commissioner and a panegyric of the riches of America.

Nervous Headache!

Dr. Copeland's Health Topic Today

It's One of the Most Common Ailments and a Frequent Cause is Eye-Strain, Says Authority, Advising Against Delay in Corrective Measures.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE of the most common ailments is headache. It is capable of incapacitating us so that for the time being we find no joy in living. Many a day of pain and ineffectual work is the consequence.

Any one of many conditions may produce headaches. They might be classified into two distinct classes, as:

1. Headaches due to some organic disease, and 2. Headaches which are symptoms of some functional disturbances.

The tissue cells and nerves of the brain are affected by the blood stream, just as every part of the body is affected by it. Poisons set up in the system are carried by the blood stream to the brain.

The chief cause of headache is eye strain. Young children, the middle-aged and those well on in years all feel the bad effects of headaches at one time or another and usually from this cause.

With eye strain often comes a "nervous head ache." School children may be sufferers from this sort because of poor lighting systems in the schoolrooms. You should have the eyes of a child examined and have glasses fitted if necessary. Long continued eye strain brings serious trouble some times.

Many persons have eye strain and headaches from looking at moving pictures. Even nausea and vomiting may occur. Such persons should have their eyes examined and rest until they are stronger.

Any disease which is pus-producing in the system, causing poisons to circulate through the blood stream, may bring with it severe headaches. Abscessed teeth, infected tonsils, diseased nasal sinuses or suppurations of the ear, ulcer of the stomach, infected kidneys or bladder an infected appendix and anaemia are productive of headaches.

If you have long-continued headaches you should see your doctor and have a thorough physical examination. It may be only the eyes, but this is in itself a most important factor. The eyes should be looked after and kept in the best of condition. There is no more sensitive organ than the delicate eye.

If it should be that you have pus formation in your system you surely want to eliminate that. Do not suffer from headaches week in and week out without doing something about it. There is always some cause for these painful ailments. Why suffer and perhaps have a worse condition by procrastination?

Have you tried, as a cure for your headache, a quiet, dark room in order that you may sleep it off? Nothing is better than refreshing sleep.

A RED DEFEAT

Communist Unemployment Day, on the whole, was mild and harmless. It turned out to be not at all the flaming protest that the international red leaders expected and hoped. Some cities saw exciting riots. A few demons/rators here and there, in a dozen countries, were hurt in the oratorical and fistic melee. The police clubbed a few heads and cops on horseback scattered a few struggling mobs. But it was too tame to suit the reds themselves.

This was partly because there are not near enough reds anywhere in this country, or even in most foreign countries, to stage anything resembling a revolution. The crowds at any such demonstration are mostly mere spectators drawn by curiosity, who mill around with the trouble-makers and come to be mistaken for them.

But the passing of the day without more serious results may be credited mostly to the growing intelligence of civil authorities and police. That is especially true in America.

It is found that when the Communists, or whatever else the reds at any particular time or place call themselves, are allowed to blow off steam without needless interference, their emotional pressure is so greatly reduced that nothing much happens. Reds date or martyrdom. The real danger is for the police to sit on the safety valve denying them free speech and assembly.

These rights still stand. Unemployment Day was a greater triumph for the Constitutional Bill of Rights than of the Communist movement.

CHECK ON HIT-SKINNERS

An ingenious New Jersey lawyer has invented a mechanical device which is to end the depredations of the hit-skin driver. It is fairly simple—a tube an inch in diameter set just above the front bumper of an automobile and so arranged that if it is jarred a trigger will eject 25 paper disks. Each disk is to bear the license number of the automobile and the name of its owner.

If the careless driver stops after an accident to pick up these tell-tale, scattered papers he will be caught. If he flees, he leaves identification behind.

It is a wonderful device, no doubt. The difficulty will be in persuading drivers to install it on their cars and to get re-fills immediately whenever the charge of paper disks has been used. If automobile manufacturers should make this a regular piece of equipment on all cars, it still seems a simple matter for a driver who contemplates hitting and skipping to bump into his own garage door just forcibly enough to get rid of the identifying papers before he sets forth on his criminally careless adventures.

It looks as if the inventor would have to try again.

Now there are to be baby blimps fool-proof cost $1,000 and capable of carrying one American family in the air. That sounds like a better idea than the heaven-thair flying device we've all been waiting for.

Uncle Eben

"There is power in the influence of a great name," said Uncle Eben. "But it has limits. You can't make a baby great by the name of Uncle Eben."

To her surprise he slammed the notebook and tucked it under his arm.

"I'm most gratified to hear that, Shirley," he repeated. "But I feel in very special danger of being tonight. And as I don't want to ruin my reputation I'll go to bed. Good night."

Shirley was amazed. This, she sensed, was no ordinary outbreak of weariness. His voice had sounded definitely angry. For long she sat by herself, puzzling her brain to discover how she had offended him.

At breakfast on the following morning he seemed to have forgotten the incident, and she, too, had put it out of her mind. At the time the hired car was waiting for her.

"Good luck with the Commissioner!" he said amiably as she left the house.

Shirley felt that she was going to have good luck with the Commissioner. Perhaps it was the really sumptuous offices that gave her that impression. She was having to make a long drive to the office, after some delay, a minor official requested her to sign a caller's book, giving particulars of herself.

She signed the book as "Mrs. Alan Bannaway," after which the minor official made small conversation with her for a full hour; then, glancing at the clock, he exclaimed abruptly:

"Monsieur Stavros awaits your pleasure, madame."

The Commissioner, a puffy Greek in early middle age, got up as she entered and then sat down abruptly as if his getting up had been a mistake—as, indeed, it had been.

"This is the first time I have had the pleasure of addressing an American lady," he said in fluent French. "Is it possible that I can have the good fortune of being of some service?"

"The Commissioner is too kind," responded Shirley, and then listened patiently to a disclaimer on the part of the Commissioner and a panegyric of the riches of America.

Nervous Headache!

Dr. Copeland's Health Topic Today

It's One of the Most Common Ailments and a Frequent Cause is Eye-Strain, Says Authority, Advising Against Delay in Corrective Measures.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE of the most common ailments is headache. It is capable of incapacitating us so that for the time being we find no joy in living. Many a day of pain and ineffectual work is the consequence.

Any one of many conditions may produce headaches. They might be classified into two distinct classes, as:

1. Headaches due to some organic disease, and
2. Headaches which are symptoms of some functional disturbances.

The tissue cells and nerves of the brain are affected by the blood stream, just as every part of the body is affected by it. Poisons set up in the system are carried by the blood stream to the brain.

The chief cause of headache is eye strain. Young children, the middle-aged and those well on in years all feel the bad effects of headache at one time or another and usually from this cause.

With eye strain often comes a "nervous headache." School children may be sufferers from this sort because of poor lighting systems in the schoolrooms. You should have the eyes of a child examined and have glasses fitted if necessary. Long continued eye strain brings serious trouble some times.

Many persons have eye strain and headaches from looking at moving pictures. Even nausea and vomiting may occur. Such persons should have their eyes examined and rest until they are stronger.

Any disease which is producing poisons in the system, causing poisons to circulate through the blood stream, may bring with it severe headaches. Abscessed teeth, infected tonsils, diseased nasal sinuses or suppuration of the ear, ulcer of the stomach, infected kidneys, or bladder an infected appendix and anaemia are productive of headaches.

If you have long-continued headaches you should see your doctor and have a thorough physical examination. It may be only the eyes, but this is in itself a most important factor. The eyes should be looked after and kept in the best of condition. There is no more sensitive organ than the delicate eye.

If it should be that you have pus formation in your system you surely want to eliminate that. Do not suffer from headaches week after week without doing something about it. There is always some cause for these painful ailments. Why suffer and perhaps have a worse condition by procrastination?

Have you tried as a cure for your headache, a quiet, dark room or headgear that you may sleep off? Nothing is better than refreshing sleep.

O. S. U. IS TO DO MUCH BUILDING

COLUMBUS, O., March 12.—Three new buildings which will be built on the Ohio State University campus at a cost of approximately $1,350,000, today had been approved by the university board of trustees following its annual monthly meeting here Tuesday afternoon.

Preliminary plans were unanimously approved and the board stated that construction on all three buildings would begin during the summer.

TOO MUCH ACID?

"Not now," writes Mrs. Mary Evans, 254 N. 5th St., Philadelphia, Pa. Her letter to us says: "Last winter I was almost a cripple. My knees cracked as I walked and the doctor said it was acid. I purchased a package of ACIDINE and after using the second package I felt like a new woman. I no longer have any aches or pains. God was good to me when he sent this wonderful medicine ACIDINE."

If you, too, suffer from gas, sour stomach, colds, too much acid and the resulting indigestion, go to your druggist and get marvelous ACIDINE. ACIDINE combats stomach trouble surely, safely, swiftly, successfully. ACIDINE is guaranteed to help in your case or money back.

National Outdoor Life Show to be Staged in Columbus

Columbus, (Special).—Stout Indians from the Black Hills of South Dakota led by Young Chief Red Cloud, grandson of the greatest war leader of the red men of the Wild West, expert log rollers from the big timber regions, native wild animals, fur bearers, game and song birds, fish—thousands of them—colorful displays, will be seen in the Columbus Auditorium, March 29 to April 5, at the National Outdoor Life Exhibition staged by Hunter-Trapper-Trapper, national sportsmen's magazine.

The exhibition brings the wilderness to the city. It's a live with the spirit of the great open spaces, and thrills with romance of the trapline, the hunt, the mountain trout stream and the glorious fascination of the wild free life of the waterways and virgin forests. It is the Sportsman's Show of Shows—interesting, entertaining.

More than 60,000 square feet of floor space will be used for the exhibition. A hall with a capacity of 100 tons of water has been installed for the log rollers' features and other aquatic events, including the casting contest open to every angler. The exhibition will be open daily from 1 to 10:30 p. m.

Among the exhibits will be a great variety of displays of merchandise and equipment associated with the sports and commercial pursuits of the big outdoors—fishing, boating, camping, fur farming, hunting and trapping. Some of the largest manufacturers in these fields will be represented.

Hunter-Trapper-Trapper, sponsor of the exhibition, is a dominant leader among national outdoor magazines. It is read in the homes of thousands of outdoor folk and in the hunting lodges in Maine, the fishing camps in Florida, the motor tourists' tents in Arizona, the wolfers' shack in the Rockies, the trapper's cabin in Alaska. It is published in Columbus.

Diamond Grounds

Most of the diamonds found in South Africa are found far below the surface in what is called "blue ground," some of the main shafts being 2,000 feet or more in depth. The Alaskan mines are of two general kinds, placer mines and lode mines. The placer mines are near the surface, while many of the lode mines are deep mines.

Whenever the end of the day finds you out-of-sorts; food doesn't tempt you and won't digest; breath is bad; tongue coated, just chew a candy tablet before bedtime. Tomorrow you'll be a new person!

All drug stores sell Cascarets for a dime, and no dollar preparation could do better work.

THINK OF YOUR AUTOMOBILE IN TERMS OF TOMORROW

Ultimate cost is as important as first cost in the purchase of an automobile

WHEN you purchase an automobile you are making an investment of a considerable amount of money. It is essential, therefore, that you give careful thought to the best selection and know what you are getting for your automobile dollars.

The first cost is important because it may mean an immediate, satisfactory saving. Of equal importance is the ultimate cost after thousands of miles of service. This ultimate cost is the true measure of automobile value.

The first cost of the new Ford is unusually low not only because of economies in manufacturing, but because the same principles that inspire these savings are extended to every other step that means greater service to the public. It is easy to see that economies in production would be of little value if they were sacrificed later through high charges for distribution, selling, financing and accessories.

The Ford dealer, therefore, does business on the same low-profit margin as the Ford Motor Company. His discount or commission is twenty-five to fifty per cent lower than that of any other automobile dealer. You gain because he makes a small profit on many sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales.

The difference in selling cost, combined with the low charges for financing and accessories, amounts to at least $50 to $75 on each car. This is as important as economies in production in keeping down the price you pay for the new Ford.

The low ultimate cost of the new Ford is the result of sound design, quality of material and unusual care in manufacturing. Friction and wear are reduced by the accuracy with which each part is made and assembled.

These factors combine to decrease the cost of operation and add months and years to the useful life of the car. The good performance and low yearly depreciation of the new Ford are indicative of the enduring quality built into it at the factory.

SERVICE charges are on the same fair, economical basis as the making and selling of the car and replacement parts are always available at low prices through all Ford dealers. In two, three or five years, depending on how much you drive, the saving in operating and maintaining a new Ford will amount to even more than the saving on the first cost.

Think in terms of tomorrow, therefore, when you purchase an automobile. For tomorrow will reveal its true worth.

Bulle Rose, editor of L'Avenir, a Paris daily, is quoted as saying that he is probably responsible for giving Clemenceau the sobriquet, "The Tiger." Clemenceau had been attacked in a political article and called as "fierce as a tiger." Here adopted the term in amusement, but it grew into a nickname that was in general use.

Quintet Qualifies For Semi-Finals

BELLPOINT EBERLY CADILLACS VICTIMS OF VERSATILE C. A. C. FIVE, FINAL SCORE 23 TO 19

Judy Gordon Crashes Through With Five Goals, While Art Steele and Rest of Aggregation Play Great Offensive and Defensive Ball To Bring Victory—Parks Holds Siegenthaler—Springfield is Next.

Playing basketball like a team of real stars only can play, the Circleville Athletic Club tossers upset the crack Bellpoint Eberly Cadillacs in the quarter-finals of the Ohio State Journal tournament Tuesday evening at Aquinas gym. The score was 23-19 and only in the last two minutes after an excellent C. A. C. lead had been cancelled, did the Club come through to win when Art Steele hit the hoop from back of the foul line and Tubby Vlerebome passed to Eve Merriman under the net for a goal.

If ever a team hated to lose its game, this Bellpoint aggregation did just that thing. The Eberly's had a team of stars that were expected to go through the tournament hands down. They drubbed the Reichenbachs and were supposed to do the same thing to Circleville, although a number of Columbus court fans favored the Club.

JUDY GORDON STARS
This C. A. C. team is not composed of individual stars but if one had ever shone in his court career, it was modest Judy Gordon in this fray. Dashing hither and yon, passing the ball like a Holman, and with a dead eye for the basket in the first half of the game, Judy rang up five field goals to aid his team greatly. He also held Hy Coyner, former Ohio Wesleyan man, to one field goal. Art Steele played his usual excellent game and scored four field goals, all of which were from behind the foul line.

Boyce Parks gave Floyd Siegenthaler the greatest race that Ohio Wesleyan star ever had. Siegenthaler scored only three field goals and when a man holds him to less than six buckets he is doing mighty fine work. After the game Siegenthaler admitted that he had been given a great chase and that he was certain his man had scampered through at least 30 miles during the game. George Vlerebome's passing and tip-off play was a big factor in the Club victory as was the work of Eve Merriman. His field goal put a "cincher" on the game.

seven field goals is doing mighty fine work. Siegenthaler, rated as one of the best centers to ever step on a Buckeye association basketball court counted three goals, all of which were one hand shots. After the first period, he did not even attempt to use his great pivot play, so tight did Parks play him. Francis Thomas, rated right along with Siegenthaler as an all-Ohio man, played good ball holding Vlerebome to one field goal, but he was held to five points. His counters came together and aided in cutting the Club lead.

TO PLAY THURSDAY
The Club tossers will play the Denton and Company quintet of Springfield in the semi-finals of the tournament Thursday evening. The Denton's have such stars as Kreger, Reierick and Elisele of Wittenberg college and although they didn't look of championship caliber in their defeat of the Florence Furnaces last night, 21-12, they have plenty of strength. Hebron Balthis Gassers and Glenford will meet in the other semi-final.

12 PRISONERS ESCAPE JAIL

Open Doors With Duplicate Keys and Cut Bell Wire In West Virginia.

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., March 11—Fourteen prisoners escaped from the McDowell county jail at Welch, early today but only twelve made good their escape. C. Cline and Denver Allen were captured at nearby Bottom creek by a posse which was headed by Howard Sly, Chief of Police of Welch.

Jailers said the convicts opened their cell doors with a duplicate key, and that they cut a wire leading to a bell in the officer's sleeping room before fleeing. All were serving short sentences for minor violations.

CLASS B 5'S TO DO BATTLE

Lancaster St. Mary's Favored To Win Central Honors From Marysville.

(BY JOSEPH K. RUKENBROD.)
COLUMBUS, O., March 12.—Fifty-six Class B basketball teams from every nook and corner of Ohio will assemble on six fields this week-end to wage the second chapter in the yearly scramble for the high school "B" championship of the state, minus the presence of last year's title-holders, Akron St. Mary's.

Eight teams, who will survive the strenuous rounds in these six district tournaments, will enter the state finals which will be fought out at Columbus one week later, March 21 and 22.

Only one of the teams which entered the finals last year, has been successful in the sectional tourneys and has gone into the district meet. The lone repeater is Marysville, which was not so successful in its own little central Ohio conference, the Tecumseh league, but came through the central class B tournament unscathed. The champs of that little 6-team league, Delaware, went down to defeat in the second round of play last Saturday.

BELLPOINT EBERLY CADILLACS VICTIMS OF VERSATILE C. A. C. FIVE, FINAL SCORE 23 TO 19

George Vlerebome's passing and tip-off play was a big factor in the Club victory as was the work of Eve Merriman. His field goal put a "cincher" on the game.

CLUB TAKES LEAD

The Club, fighting like demons, started off like world beaters.

Tubby Vlerebome scored the first goal when he took a pass under the net. Merriman missed a foul shot and Moore connected for one. Gordon got his first goal but Siegenthaler cancelled that with a one hand shot. Coyner scored his only goal of the game and put the Eberly's in a momentary lead, and momentary it was for Judy Gordon cracked through with a field goal and on the next tip-off scored another. The Eberly's took time out with the score 8-5.

When the teams lined up Gordon again scored a fast goal and Art Steele hit his first one from far out. Siegenthaler fouled Parks, but Boyce missed. Steele scored another field goal and Gordon again scored from action. The Eberly's again asked for time. The score was 16-5. Watson went in for Moore just before the half ended.

Steele came through with a beautiful goal from far out when the half ended but those two were the only points the Club obtained while the Cadillacs were cutting their lead and going ahead. Siegenthaler pushed one over his head from the side and Red Watson counted two free throws. Siegenthaler missed two free tosses and Thomas counted a set shot from the side. He made a foul and again scored from the side over Vlerebome's head. The score was now 16-14 and the Club took time out.

Watson scored a one hand heave from the side and the score was tied. Vlerebome missed a free throw and Siegenthaler put his team ahead with a goal. Merriman missed a free throw and Steele counted a charity toss.

GAME NEARS END

The game was nearing an end and the Club led 19-18. The local lads took the leather down the floor, passing rapidly among themselves, and finally Steele dropped a shot from just back of the foul line which proved the game winner. Moore counted one free throw, and then Merriman broke loose to score the final points on a pass from Vlerebome.

World War Air Fighting

Various types of combat planes were used in the World war and the guns were not always mounted in the same fashion. With the single-seaters it was common or usual to fire through the propeller's arc. German planes were equipped with parachutes toward the end of the war, but scarcely any of the Allied planes carried them.

Emile Bure, editor of L'Avenor, a Paris daily, is quoted as saying that he is probably responsible for giving Clemenceau the sobriquet, "the Tiger." Clemenceau had been attacked in a political article and called as "fierce as a tiger." Bure adopted the term in amusement, but it grew into a nickname that was in general use.

Ice of 1½ inches in thickness is generally strong enough to support a man. Four inches of ice is necessary to support cavalry and light guns, 5 inches to support an 84-pound cannon, 10 inches of ice will support a crowd, 18 inches a railroad train.

LOVELESS TWINS' QUARTETTE

Twin brothers married to twin sisters (in fact they look enough alike to be quadruplets) make this quartet the most unique organization on the American platform today.

For the past nine years they have been giving concert entertainments from coast to coast and from Canada to Mexico with the leading Concert Lyceum and Chautauqua Bureaus of America.

All four grew up together in the same town and now make their homes in duplex houses each furnished exactly like the other. They have been singing together since they were children. Their voice have that perfect blend and professional finish which only experience and association together can give.

Their program consists of both vocal and instrumental numbers from the best things in standard and popular music—something for every variety of taste. The outstanding feature is rich, wonderful harmony. It has been seen many times, "Their voices blend so well they sound like a great organ."

The last half of their program is given in lighter vein, including an Hawaiian presentation in costume with steel guitars and ukuleles.

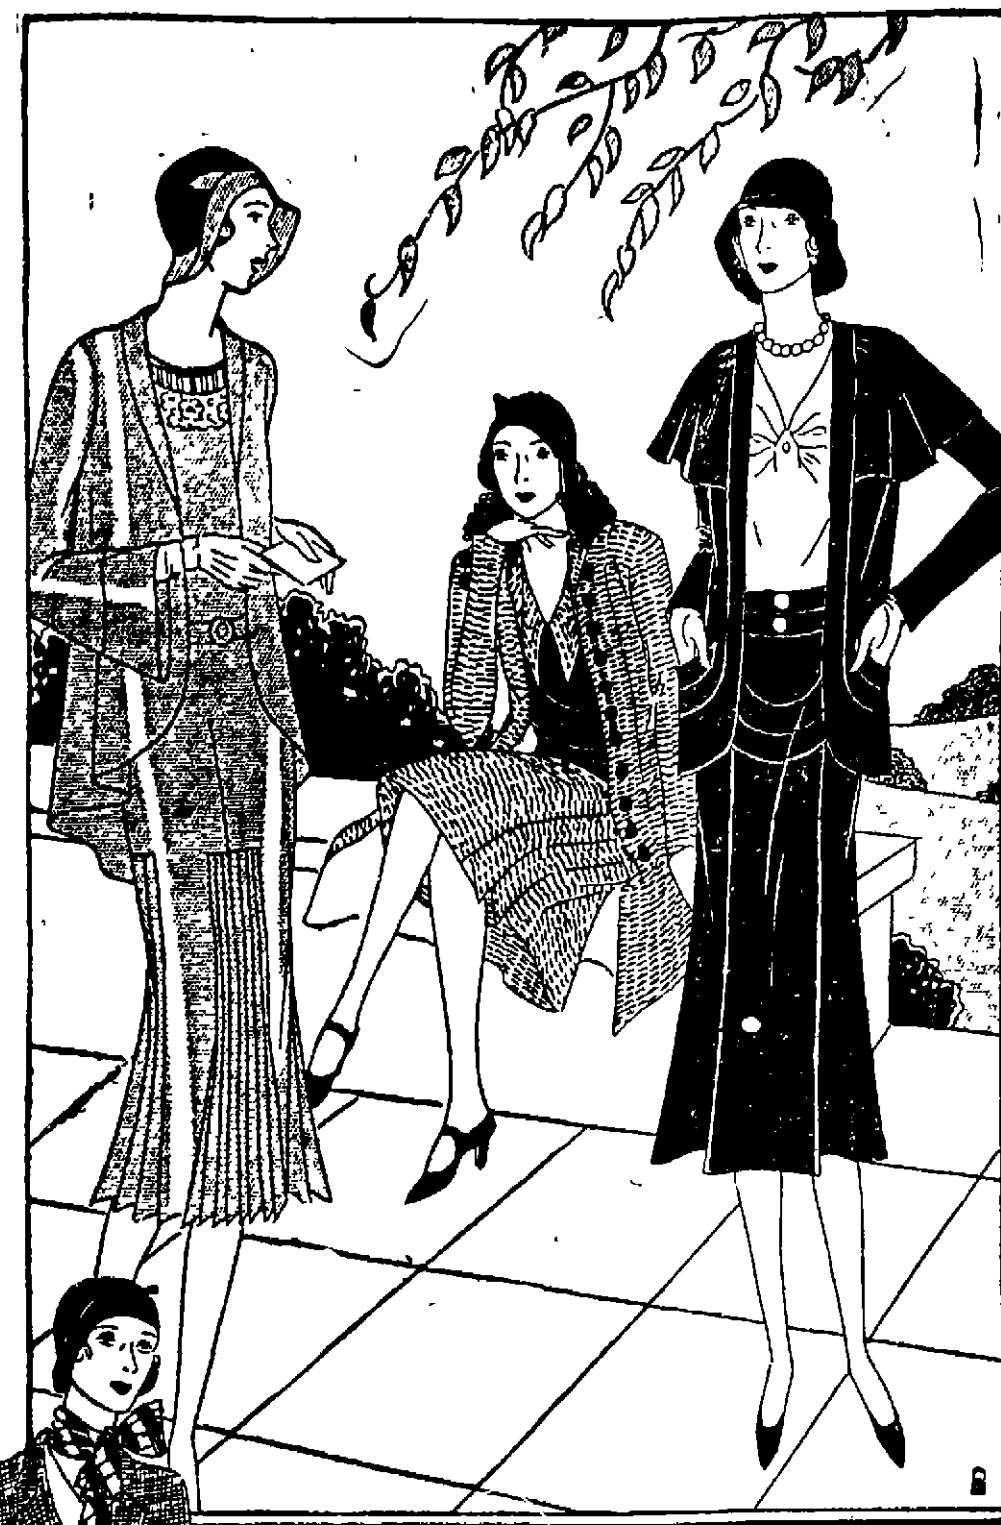

In 1928 the Victor Phonograph people recognized their ability as artists and secured their services in making records.
